WORK EXPERIENCE

January 2000 - Present

Self-employed consultant on federal sentencing and related issues.

May 9,1977-December 31,1999 Federal Probation Officer (Retired as Chief)

- 1977 May -December: Federal Probation Officer for the Southern District of New York.
- 1978-79: Federal Probation Officer, District of Massachusetts, Springfield Division
- 1979-86: Federal Probation Officer, Supervisor Springfield/Worcester
- 1986-1995: Deputy Chief U.S. Probation Officer, D/MA
- 1995 - 12/31/99: Chief U.S. Probation Officer D/MA

My 22 year career in Federal Probation began as a supervision officer in the drug unit in Southern District New York. After transferring to Massachusetts, I wrote presentence reports and supervised a diverse population of white collar and inner city clients. When promoted to supervisor, I managed and oversaw the work of officers in two locations. Effective management of satellite offices required an extensive knowledge of and network with the Bureau of Prisons, Parole Commission and Marshal's Service, state courts, jails, and probation offices. Later I moved into the Boston office on my promotion to deputy chief. From there, I became immersed in the new sentencing regime prior to their implementation on November 1, 1987.

In 1987, I became responsible for ensuring the training and performance of all probation officers in this district -- that is, their understanding and performance in writing presentence reports and performing their supervision function. In addition, my activities extended outside the office as a resource for training and consultation in various matters relating to sentencing guidelines, the role of the probation office, Bureau of Prisons matters, and parole issues. In 1988, Magistrate Judge Larry Cohen and I developed a sentencing database program to keep track of sentencing issues under the guidelines. This information has served as the basis for articles and numerous appearances to keep the Massachusetts Bar informed.

As Chief, in addition to my involvement in the sentencing guidelines, my duties expanded into management areas. The staff grew by 35% in the four years of my tenure and I oversaw the opening of two new satellite offices and the move to the new Courthouse. Throughout those years, I maintained my interest and immersion in sentencing issues. The sentencing database piqued the interest of several judges and is now available to them with the click of a mouse. The data are also available to lawyers on request. Some make use of the statistics in sentencing.

1976-1977: Inpatient Treatment Counselor at Bernstein Institute at Beth Israel Hospital, New York City.

1969-76: Narcotic Parole Officer with Narcotic Addiction Control Commission of New York State (except for period of residence abroad, September 1972-September 1974).

1965-69: Caseworker at St. Joseph's Hall, Brooklyn (except for period of residence abroad, September 1967-November 1968)
